VETERANS DAY
Justice - Freedom - Democracy

Embodied within the meanings of these words are goals of perfection toward which mankind has constantly aspired. Today, there are more than 23 million men and women in the United States who have served their country in pursuit of the attainment of these ideals. They have met the greatest obligation of citizenship.

They are our war veterans - 23 million strong - veterans of service in World War I, World War II, the Korean War, and the Vietnam Era. All of them answered the country's call to arms to meet the threat of an armed aggressor.

They served honorably a cause which had as its objective Not the attainment of an additional square inch of territorial possession. Their sacrifices were in behalf of a national purpose which was not the subjugation of one additional person. Their service was for the preservation of our American heritage, for the cause of individual dignity, for the opportunity of self-determination for those too long under the yoke of tyranny.

No one hates war more than the war veteran. No one is more dedicated to the attainment of an honorable world peace than the veteran who has known the wanton waste of war. No one seeks justice and freedom for mankind more than the war veteran who has witnessed the human misery wrought by forces seeking to dominate others through armed aggression.

Much of this country's greatness can be traced to the willing and dedicated service of her citizens in the quest toward those lofty goals of JUSTICE, FREEDOM, AND DEMOCRACY. This country is unique in her attitude of continuing recognition and esteem for her war veterans.

The word "veteran" carries a general connotation of honor; it symbolizes an American's willingness to sacrifice to further the national purpose.

From this perspective, let's look to the observances of Veterans Day, Sunday, Nov. 11, 1973:, here in Appomattox. Let's take some time from our normal day's routine to join in the observance of this patriotic holiday and say, "Thanks!" to all of our veterans.

Letter To The Forum

Appomattox, Va.
October 30, 1973

Mr. Lloyd Vaughan
Times-Virginian
Appomattox, Va. 24522

Dear Mr. Vaughan:

Recently Appomattox town Manager, Bill Slagle, presented a program for our sorority chapter on the Appomattox Downtown Project. Chapter members and guests examined drawings depicting Main Street Appomattox remodeled to resemble an 1865 setting. The drawings were the culmination of an intensive study by Virginia Tech graduate students. Mr. Slagle explained that these are ideas which are not firmly set and that changes in the drawings and plans are still possible. He emphasized that the concept of the Appomattox Downtown Project is what our attention should be drawn to at this time.

We, as a group, were quite favorably impressed with the concept and aims of the Appomatox Downtown Project. The revitalization of Main Street Appomattox is necessary in order for that area to compete with the impending onslaught of satelite shopping centers.

We wish to thank Mr. Slagle for such an informative program. We commend him and the Virginia Tech students for the fine job that they have done.

During the upcoming Historic Appomattox Railroad Festival, Nov. 3rd and 4th, the drawings for this project will be on display at the Main Street Appomattox Railroad Station. It is a fine opportunity to become familiar with the project.

We feel that it is in the best interest of every individual, club and civic organization of our community to get involved in revitalizing Main Street. Since the project is still flexible there is a real opportunity for every citizen in our community to have a part in the planning as well as the implementation of the Appomattox Downtown Project.

Yours truly,
Amy Nash, Corresponding Secretary
Appomattox Delta Zeta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi

The Pastor Speaks
"MONEY"

Everyone has to have it. It seems we never have enough as hard as we work and save. "If I only had a little bit more," we often feel, "then everything would by A-O.D."

Money quite often becomes an intensely personal thing, doesn't it? It seems to represent our very selves. We only discuss it in specific surroundings, and with select persons. The price paid for an item purchased (especially a large item like a house or automobile) we keep secret. For people to know our money-business is almost for people to know our innermost thoughts!

Sometimes we save money as though life depended on it. We hold on to it as dear..looking toward a day when it will be needed. A rainy day. It is important to be furture-minded.

There is a question for the Christian and his money. "What does my money mean to me?"

That question is important for the Christian because money can easily become what we worship, what we care most about. Money is a thing: a thing to be used. And for you and me as Christians, we are called to use our money for the Glory of God.

The Sunday School Lesson

P. O. Box 1833

Comment on the International Sunday School lesson for Sunday, November 11, 1973.

Topic: Living Victoriously in Society

Scripture: Rom. 12: 14-13:14.

Love does no wrong to a neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law. Romans 13:10.

When the believer commits his life to God, he takes out citizenship papaers in the kingdom of God. But becoming a citizen in the kingdom of God does not move him out of society and the political jurisdiction in which he lives. He must live with non-believers was well as with fellow-believers. He does not abandon his citizenship in the civil state or the privileges, obligations, and responsibilities of that citizenship.

To Christians these are pertinent questions. It would be so much easier to live the Christian life if the individual could withdraw from the world into the fellowship, though even living together in a Christian community poses its problems. The differences which arise among Christians, even in the same fellow ship, show the need for guidelines in living together. The monastic life has its appeal. Even outside those communions which have monastic orders there is a tendency, encouraged by numerous and extensive church programs, to concentrate activities within the church.

The relationship of the believer to the civil state is also pertinent, now as it was in the Roman world. Today it is easy to say that politics is corrupt and the Christian should keep out of political affairs. Such a view reflects a monastic attitude, but it is hardly Christian. Unless the Christian exercises his Christian influence in civic and political affairs, government (rulers, in Paul's term) may soon become a terror to good conduct, as rulers and governments have become at varous times in history. We have a real problem in persons who have formal or nominal affiliation with Christian churches who no apply Christian principles in the performance of their public duties. Watergate is only the most recent flagrant example of this failure of nominal Christians in public life to be truly Christian. On the individual level, it is one of the duties of the Christian to vote and other wise participate in government in such a way as brings a Christian influence to bear on the conduct of government.

Paul had a solution to these problems which may be simply expressed but is not so simple in application. Writing to Corinthian Christians about spiritual gifts, he declared that the greatest of spiritual gifts was one every believer could have and should earnestly desire to have. The greatest of spiritual gifts also provides the key for loving together in the Christian community, in secular society, and in the civil state. It is love. The excellent guidelines for living together, found in Romans 12:14-21, can be followed only through the motivation of love which Paul described in 1 Corinthians 12. This fort of love enables people to live together harmoniously. The laws which regulate the social order and the political state may be summarized in the law, "You shall love your neighbor as yourself."

This positively expressed law governing human relationships also expressed the true purpose of law, which is to secure safety or person and security of property to every one. Law, as Paul so truly put it, in itself provides the temptation to man to break it; nevertheless we cannot repeal laws for this reason. Without law there would be anarchy in the state and chaos in society, and neither or these is good for man. Under them, no individual's person or property would be safe. We need law for the protection of people.

But we must go beyond the fact of law to get the motive for obeying it. This motive is that love which embraces all people in its scope. It includes respect for all, but it is far more: a genuine concern for their well-being. Because "love does no wrong to neighbor," Paul could conclude, "therefore love is the fulfilling of the law."
